

THE INTERNET MUST BE REGULATED BY THE FCC UNDER TITLE 2. ANY CHANGE FROM THIS IS A BLATANT POWER GRAB BY CORPORATE INTERESTS. PERIOD.

The argument that regulation reduces the "amount" of something you will have, or investment in it, is incorrectly applied in this case.

And even if we don't accept that, despite Corporate statements to shareholders (such as Verizon's) that regulating net neutrality will not in fact reduce their investment in infrastructure...

I would rather live in a world with a slightly slower, and non-biased internet connection, than one that is a battlefield for the top bidders with relative speed and turgidity.
